UPDATED MARCH, 2017

ATUALIZADO EM MARÇO DE 2017

Catalogs and lists of species are important tools in the study of biodiversity of localities, states, countries and zoogeographic regions. Throughout the years, several catalogs as well as lists of Ceratopogonidae tribes and genera have been created in order to update the species lists for family study facilitation. Ceratopogonidae catalogs and lists from different parts of the World are accessible in < <http://campus.belmont.edu/cienews/cie.html>>. From the Neotropical Region, the most recent Ceratopogonidae species catalogs have been elaborated by Borkent & Spinelli (2000, 2007). Nicaraguan, Argentine and Mexican species were published sequentially by Maes & Wirth (1990), Spinelli & Wirth (1993) and Ibanez-Bernal et al. (1996). Ceratopogonidae fauna was also mentioned by Wirth (1952, 1957), Davies & Giglioli (1979) and Borkent (1991) for Juan Fernandez, Grand Cayman and Galápagos Islands, respectively. Culicoides species lists from Argentina, Colombia and Costa Rica are available in the publications by Spinelli et al. (2005, 2009) and Spinelli & Borkent (2004). However from Brazil, no list of species has ever been published despite the big country size and biome diversity. Surveys of species, particularly from Culicoides, has been conducted in different Brazilian States due to the medical and veterinary importance as well as the emerging Culicoides-borne diseases. Thus, the data of the Ceratopogonidae species records in Brazil are scattered in different manuscripts, which complicates investigation.

The purpose of this list is to provide the described and recorded Ceratopogonidae species to Brazil and the current distribution in the 26 Brazilian States. A table with species number distributed with respect to genera reported in the Neotropical region, Brazil and the Brazilian Amazon Region is included together with a brief history of Brazilian Ceratopogonidae fauna studies. The distribution of Neotropical species out of Brazil can be accessed in Borkent & Spinelli (2000, 2007).

In this list, we follow the species arrangement according to the catalog of “World Ceratopogonidae fauna” and “Subgeneric classification of species of Culicoides” by Borkent (2015a, b) and “Catalog of Neotropical Ceratopogonidae” by Borkent & Spinelli (2007). The distribution of species was adopted from specific literature including the most recent records of Culicoides from the Brazilian Amazon Region States from Castellón & Felipe-Bauer (2015) in addition to reliable localities with regard to the pertinent species deposited in the entomological collections of the following Institutions: Faculty of Public Health, University of São Paulo, São Paulo, Brazil; Ceratopogonidae Collection of Oswaldo Cruz Foundation, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; National Museum of Natural History, Washington, DC, United States and British Museum, London, United Kingdom. In doubt of species presence in the cited localities, we chose to maintain them in the distribution until further studies, as revisions of genera, subgenera or species group are carried out to confirm or not their presence.

The species records are included in alphabetical order of Brazilian States after the indication of the locality type, considering the geopolitical regions (North, Northeast, Midwest, Southeast and South). In 1977, the state of Mato Grosso was split into the states of Mato Grosso and Mato Grosso do Sul and in 1989, the state of Goiás divided into the states of Goiás and Tocantins. Localities mentioned in manuscripts prior to these dates had to be updated due to the newly created States. When the collection site of the species is not provided in the original paper, we consider the cited geographic region of the species.

To set the species in the Neotropical Region we relied on the biogeographical regionalisation of the Neotropical Region by Morrone (2014). For inclusion of species in the Brazilian Amazon Region, we considered the political map of the “Amazônia Legal Brasileira”, despite the fragility of geographical borders in the delimitation of the species distribution. Brazilian municipalities and states included here can be accessed in: <http://www.cidades.ibge.gov.br/xtras/home.php>

This list recognizes 1249 extant valid Ceratopogonidae species in the Neotropical Region, 491 in Brazil and 268 in the Brazilian Amazon Region. The Ceratopogoninae subfamily is the most represented according to the studies of the sanitary important Culicoides genus. This subfamily is better studied in the North and Southeast Brazilian regions and few species have been reported for the Brazilian northeast region despite containing nine States in an area of 1.558.196 km<sup>2</sup>. Forcipomyinae is the second subfamily with a higher number of species, followed by Dasyheleinae. These two subfamilies are founded in the north, northeast, southeast and south of Brazil, and for Midwest Brazil, only four species have been reported for Forcipomyinae. For Leptoconopinae, only Leptoconops brasiliensis (Lutz) and Leptoconops knowltoni Clastrier & Wirth have been cited for the northern and southern Brazilian coastal areas. A close look at the number of listed species indicates the need for further studies in the five Brazilian geopolitical regions, especially in the Midwest and Northeast that encompass the natural biomes of Cerrado, Pantanal and Caatinga. In the Northeast, no Ceratopogonidae species has ever been reported for the States of Alagoas and Sergipe. Despite political inclusion in the northern region, Tocantins State presents a Cerrado biome and has no records of Ceratopogonidae as of yet.

We intend to update annually the species reported from Brazil and their records for the Brazilian States. We hope that the cited data and references available online may aid the systematic, biodiversity, biogeographical and epidemiological studies regarding the Ceratopogonidae fauna.

For corrections and additions, please contact the authors through e-mails included in the list cover.

Brief historical report of the Brazilian Ceratopogonidae fauna studies.

Jean Jacques Kieffer was one of the most important naturalists who studied the world Ceratopogonidae fauna during the first quarter of the 20th Century. He proposed hundreds of taxa, of which several tribe, genera, subgenera and species are still valid. The species from Kieffer later reported for Brazil have been described based on material, particularly, from Paraguay. Daniel William Coquillett (1904) described the first Ceratopogonidae species from Brazil, Ceratopogon guttatus (Culicoides guttatus), based on three specimens collected by Adolpho Lutz in São Paulo State. Emílio Augusto Goeldi, from Paraense Museum, later Museu Paraense Emilio Goeldi, described a new genus and species, Haematomyidium paraense (Culicoides paraensis) in the manuscript “Os moquitos no Pará” published in 1905. Actually, C. paraensis is considered the most medical important species, due to Oropouche fever transmission and the possible implication in the transmission of Mansonellose in the Brazilian Amazon region. Adolpho Lutz (1913, 1914) described 15 new species belonging to diverse genera of Ceratopogonidae, and Ângelo Moreira da Costa Lima (1928, 1937) described four new Culicoides and Forcipomyia species and designed a key for the identification of the Culicoides of the Neotropical Region. Frederico Simões Barbosa (1943-1952) described new Neotropical Culicoides species, some still valid, his primary focus of study being Culicoides from the State of Pernambuco. John William Scott Macfie has produced several important manuscripts concerning the world Ceratopogonidae fauna, in which from Brazil, he described from 1935 to 1953 numerous species, especially from Santa Catarina State, based on specimens collected by Fritz Plaumann. In “A report on a collection of Brazilian Ceratopogonidae”, Macfie characterized 40 new species belonging to 13 genera. From 1942 to 1964, Irving Fox published a series of papers, primarily on the Caribbean Culicoides, also electing Avaritia, Hoffmania and Macfiella as subgenera of Culicoides. John Lane (1944-1964) and Oswaldo P. Forattini (1953-1960) described and redescribed several Neotropical species and published bionomic data about Culicoides from the mangrove swamp in São Vicente, São Paulo. In 1957, Forattini published a book intitled “Culicoides da Região Neotropical” including a key for identification of species. His life and bibliography, written in Portuguese, can be found in <<http://www.scielosp.org/pdf/rsp/v41n6/03.pdf>>. Ignacio Ortíz (1950-1961) in collaboration with Luis A. León and Marie Mirsa, dealing especially with the Culicoides from Venezuela and Ecuador, described dozens of species, some of them reported later in Brazil. Jean Clastrier carried on his Ceratopogonidae research activities from 1968 to 1995 also in the Neotropical Region, focusing primarily on the Guyana fauna. He also published Brazilian species of Forcipomyia with material from Pará and Santa Catarina States. His life and scientific contributions can be accessed in <<http://campus.belmont.edu/cienews/Clastrier.html>>. From 1953 until his death in 1994, Willis W. Wirth motivated the studies of World Ceratopogonidae fauna with descriptions of hundreds of taxa in important and numerous manuscripts, extensive revisions, including handbooks, catalogs and species lists. Wirth and Blanton (1973) published “A review of the maruins or biting midges of the genus Culicoides (Diptera: Ceratopogonidae) in the Amazon Basin”, the first consolidation of the Culicoides species from the Brazilian Amazon Region, with a description of 15 new species. His life and contributions is available in <<http://campus.belmont.edu/cienews/Wirth.html>>. During three years, from 1978 to 1980, Omar Tavares and collaborators studying material from Rio de Janeiro, characterized 14 new species, actually belonging to the Culicoides, Monohelea and Downeshelea genera. More recently, since 1990, Eloy G. Castellón has been publishing papers regarding survey and some bionomic aspects of Culicoides from the Amazonas and Pará States. Since 1981, Gustavo R. Spinelli and co-authors have been concentrating on Neotropical Ceratopogonidae, publishing studies, including revisions, which contributed with knowledge of the Brazilian biting midges, especially those of the Argentine fauna. Since 1987, Maria Luiza Felippe-Bauer and collaborators have been conducting taxonomy studies of Neotropical Ceratopogonidae, mainly of Brazilian Culicoides, describing several new species.

Catálogos e listas de espécies são ferramentas importantes no estudo da biodiversidade de localidades, estados, países e regiões zoogeográficas. Ao longo dos anos, vários catálogos e listas de tribos e gêneros de Ceratopogonidae têm sido feitos a fim de atualizar as listas de espécies para facilitar o estudo da família. Catálogos e listas de Ceratopogonidae de diferentes partes do mundo estão disponíveis em <<http://campus.belmont.edu/cienews/cie.html>>. Para a região Neotropical, os mais recentes catálogos das espécies de Ceratopogonidae foram realizados por Borkent & Spinelli (2000, 2007). Espécies de Nicarágua, Argentina e México foram publicadas sequencialmente por Maes & Wirth (1990), Spinelli & Wirth (1993) e Ibanez-Bernal et al. (1996). A fauna de Ceratopogonidae foi também mencionada por Wirth (1952, 1953), Davies & Giglioli (1979) e Borkent (1991) para as Ilhas de Juan Fernandez, Grand Cayman e Galápagos, respectivamente. Listas das espécies de Culicoides para a Argentina, Colômbia e Costa Rica são obtidas nas publicações de Spinelli et al. (2005, 2009) e Spinelli & Borkent (2004). No entanto para o Brasil, nenhuma lista de espécie tem sido publicada, apesar da grande dimensão do país e da diversidade de biomas. Levantamentos de espécies, especialmente de Culicoides, têm sido realizados em diferentes estados brasileiros devido a importância médica e veterinária, bem como a transmissão de enfermidades emergentes por Culicoides. Assim, dados de registros de espécies de Ceratopogonidae no Brasil estão dispersos em diferentes manuscritos, o que torna a pesquisa trabalhosa.

O propósito dessa lista é fornecer as espécies de Ceratopogonidae descritas e reportadas para o Brasil e sua atual distribuição nos 26 estados brasileiros. Uma tabela com o número das espécies distribuídas por gênero reportadas para a Região Neotropical, Brasil e para a Região Amazônica Brasileira é incluída juntamente com um breve histórico dos estudos da fauna brasileira de Ceratopogonidae. A distribuição das espécies neotropicais fora do território brasileiro pode ser obtida em Borkent & Spinelli (2000, 2007).

Nessa lista, seguimos a ordenação das espécies conforme o catálogo “World Ceratopogonidae fauna” e “Subgeneric classification of species of Culicoides” de Borkent (2015a, b) e o “Catalog of Neotropical Ceratopogonidae” de Borkent & Spinelli (2007). A distribuição das espécies foi baseada na literatura específica incluindo os mais recentes registros de Culicoides para os estados da Região Amazônica Brasileira de Castellón & Felippe-Bauer (2015) além das localidades fiáveis relacionadas as espécies depositadas nas coleções entomológicas das seguintes instituições: Faculdade de Saúde Pública, Universidade de São Paulo, Brasil; Coleção de Ceratopogonidae da Fundação Oswaldo Cruz, Rio de Janeiro, Brasil; Museu Nacional de História Natural, Washington, DC, Estados Unidos e Museu Britânico, Londres, Inglaterra. Na dúvida da presença de espécies nas localidades citadas, optamos por mantê-las na distribuição até que futuros estudos, como revisões de gênero, subgênero ou grupo de espécies sejam realizados para confirmar ou não a presença das mesmas.

Os registros das espécies estão incluídos em ordem alfabética dos estados brasileiros após a indicação da localidade tipo, considerando as regiões geopolíticas (Norte, Nordeste, Centro-oeste, Sudeste e Sul). Em 1977, o estado de Mato Grosso foi separado nos estados de Mato Grosso e Mato Grosso do Sul e em 1989, o estado de Goiás foi dividido nos estados de Goiás e Tocantins. Localidades mencionadas em manuscritos anteriores a essas datas foram atualizadas devido à criação desses novos estados. Quando a localidade de coleta da espécie não é fornecida no trabalho original, consideramos a região geográfica citada para a espécie.

Para inserir as espécies na Região Neotropical contamos com o trabalho de regionalização biogeográfica da Região Neotropical de Morrone (2014). Para inclusão das espécies na Região Amazônica Brasileira, nós consideramos o mapa político da “Amazônia Legal Brasileira”, apesar da fragilidade das fronteiras geográficas na delimitação da distribuição das espécies. Os municípios e estados brasileiros aqui incluídos podem ser acessados em <http://www.cidades.ibge.gov.br/xtras/home.php>

Essa lista reconhece 1249 espécies de Ceratopogonidae existentes e válidas para a Região Neotropical, 491 para o Brasil e 268 para a Região Amazônica Brasileira. A subfamília Ceratopogoninae é a melhor representada devido aos estudos do gênero Culicoides, com importância sanitária. Essa subfamília é bem estudada nas regiões norte e sudeste do Brasil e poucas espécies têm sido reportadas para o nordeste brasileiro, apesar de abranger nove estados em uma área de 1.558.196 km<sup>2</sup>. Forcipomyinae é a segunda subfamília com maior número de espécies, seguida de Dasyheleinae. Essas duas subfamílias são encontradas nas regiões norte, nordeste, sudeste e sul do Brasil, e para o Centro-oeste, apenas quatro espécies têm sido reportadas para Forcipomyinae. Para Leptoconopinae, apenas Leptoconops brasiliensis (Lutz) e Leptoconops knowltoni Clastrier & Wirth têm sido citadas para as áreas costeiras do norte e sul do Brasil. Um olhar atento ao número das espécies listadas indica a necessidade de futuros estudos nas cinco regiões geopolíticas brasileiras, especialmente na Centro-oeste e Nordeste que abriga os biomas naturais de Cerrado, Pantanal e Caatinga. No Nordeste, nenhuma espécie de Ceratopogonidae tem sido reportada para os estados de Alagoas e Sergipe. Apesar de politicamente incluído na região norte, o estado de Tocantins apresenta um bioma de cerrado e não tem registros de Ceratopogonidae até o presente.

Pretendemos atualizar anualmente as espécies reportadas para o Brasil e seus registros para os estados brasileiros. Esperamos que os dados incluídos e as referências disponíveis possam auxiliar os estudos da Sistemática, Biodiversidade, Biogeografia e Epidemiologia relacionados à fauna de Ceratopogonidae.

Breve histórico dos estudos da fauna de Ceratopogonidae do Brasil.

Jean Jacques Kieffer foi um dos mais importantes naturalistas que estudou a fauna mundial de Ceratopogonidae durante o primeiro quartel do Século XX. Ele propôs centenas de taxons, dos quais várias tribos, gêneros, subgêneros e espécies são ainda válidos. As espécies de Kieffer relatadas posteriormente para o Brasil têm sido descritas baseadas em material, especialmente, do Paraguai. Daniel William Coquillett (1904) descreveu a primeira espécie de Ceratopogonidae para o Brasil, Ceratopogon guttatus (Culicoides guttatus), baseada em três exemplares coletados por Adolpho Lutz no estado de São Paulo. Emílio Augusto Goeldi, do Museu Paraense, posteriormente, Museu Paraense Emilio Goeldi, descreveu um novo gênero e espécie, Haematomyidium paraense (Culicoides paraensis) no manuscrito “Os moquitos no Pará” publicado em 1905. Atualmente, C. paraensis é considerada a espécie de maior importância médica, devido a transmissão da Febre de Oropouche e a possível implicação na transmissão da Mansonelose na Região Amazônica

Brasileira. Adolpho Lutz (1913, 1914) descreveu 15 novas espécies pertencentes a diversos gêneros de Ceratopogonidae, e Ângelo Moreira da Costa Lima (1928, 1937) descreveu quatro novas espécies de Culicoides e Forcipomyia e fez uma chave para a identificação dos Culicoides da Região Neotropical. Frederico Simões Barbosa (1943-1952) descreveu novas espécies de Culicoides neotropicais, algumas ainda válidas, focando seus estudos principalmente nos Culicoides do estado de Pernambuco. John William Scott Macfie publicou vários manuscritos importantes no que concerne a fauna mundial de Ceratopogonidae, dos quais para o Brasil, ele descreveu de 1935 a 1953 numerosas espécies, especialmente para o estado de Santa Catarina, baseadas em espécimes coletados por Fritz Plaumann. Em “A report on a collection of Brazilian Ceratopogonidae”, Macfie caracterizou 40 novas espécies incluídas em 13 gêneros. De 1942 a 1964, Irving Fox publicou uma série de trabalhos, principalmente sobre os Culicoides do Caribe, elegendo também Avaritia, Hoffmania e Macfiella como subgênero de Culicoides. John Lane (1944-1964) e Oswaldo P. Forattini (1953-1960) descreveram e redescreveram várias espécies neotropicais e publicaram dados bionômicos sobre Culicoides de manguezal em São Vicente, São Paulo. Em 1957, Forattini publicou um livro intitulado “Culicoides da Região Neotropical” incluindo uma chave para identificação das espécies. Sua vida e bibliografia, escritas em Português, podem ser encontradas em <<http://www.scielosp.org/pdf/rsp/v41n6/03.pdf>>. Ignacio Ortiz (1950-1961) em colaboração com Luis A. Léon e Marie Mirsa, trabalharam especialmente com os Culicoides da Venezuela e Equador, descrevendo dezenas de espécies, algumas delas reportadas posteriormente para o Brasil. Jean Clastrier exerceu suas atividades de pesquisa em Ceratopogonidae de 1968 a 1995 também na Região Neotropical, focado principalmente na fauna da Guiana. Ele também publicou espécies de Forcipomyia do Brasil com material dos estados do Pará e de Santa Catarina. Sua vida e contribuições científicas podem ser acessadas através do site <<http://campus.belmont.edu/cienews/Clastrier.html>>. De 1953 até sua morte em 1994, Willis W. Wirth impulsionou os estudos da fauna mundial de Ceratopogonidae com descrições de centenas de taxons em importantes e numerosos manuscritos, amplas revisões, incluindo livros, catálogos e listas de espécies. Wirth and Blanton (1973) publicaram “A review of the maruins or biting midges of the genus Culicoides (Diptera: Ceratopogonidae) in the Amazon Basin”, a primeira reunião das espécies de Culicoides da Região Amazônica Brasileira, com descrição de 15 novas espécies. Sua vida e contribuições estão disponíveis em <<http://campus.belmont.edu/cienews/Wirth.html>>. Durante três anos, de 1978 a 1980, Omar Tavares e colaboradores estudando material do Rio de Janeiro, caracterizaram 14 novas espécies, atualmente pertencentes aos gêneros Culicoides, Monohelea e Downeshelea. Mais recentemente, desde 1990, Eloy G. Castellón tem publicado manuscritos relativos ao levantamento e alguns aspectos da bionomia de Culicoides dos estados do Amazonas e Pará. Desde 1981, Gustavo R. Spinelli e coautores têm se dedicado aos Ceratopogonidae neotropicais, publicando estudos, incluindo revisões, os quais contribuem com o conhecimento dos ceratopogonídeos brasileiros, principalmente os da fauna Argentina. Desde 1987, Maria Luiza Felipe-Bauer e colaboradores têm conduzido estudos taxonômicos dos Ceratopogonidae neotropicais, principalmente de Culicoides do Brasil, descrevendo várias espécies novas.

SUBFAMILY CERATOPOGONINAE NEWMAN, 1834

TRIBE CERATOPOGONINI

Genus ALLUAUDOMYIA Kieffer

ALLUAUDOMYIA Kieffer, 1913a: 12. Type species: Alluaudomyia imparunguis Kieffer, by monotypy.

NEOCERATOPOGON Malloch, 1915a: 310. Type species: Ceratopogon bellus Coquillett, by original designation.

Subgenus RHYNCHOFORCIPOMYIA Wirth and Dow

RHYNCHOFORCIPOMYIA Wirth & Dow, 1972: 863 (as subgenus of Forcipomyia). Type species: Forcipomyia messersmithi Wirth & Dow, by original designation.

brachyrhyncha Wirth & Dow, 1972: 867. Colombia. Brazil records – Bahia

guamai Wirth & Dow, 1972: 869. Brazil (Pará)

Subgenus SALIOHELEA Wirth & Ratanaworabhan

SALIOHELEA Wirth & Ratanaworabhan, 1978: 494 (as subgenus of Forcipomyia). Type species: Forcipomyia leei Wirth & Ratanaworabhan, by original designation.

leei Wirth & Ratanaworabhan, 1978: 498. Colombia. Brazil records – Amazonas, Pará, Bahia, Rio de Janeiro, Santa Catarina

Subgenus SCHIZOFORCIPOMYIA Chan & LeRoux

SCHIZOFORCIPOMYIA Chan & LeRoux, 1971: 271 (as subgenus of Forcipomyia). Type species: Forcipomyia petersoni Chan & LeRoux (= Forcipomyia borbonica Clastrier), by original designation.

cinctipes (Coquillett), 1905: 64 (Ceratopogon). USA (Florida). Brazil records – Pará, Bahia

Subgenus SYNTHYRIDOMYIA Saunders

SYNTHYRIDOMYIA Saunders, 1957: 688 (as subgenus of Forcipomyia). Type species: Lasiohelea acidicola Tokunaga, by original designation.

tenuiforceps Macfie, 1939a: 167. Brazil (Santa Catarina)

Subgenus THYRIDOMYIA Saunders

THYRIDOMYIA Saunders, 1925: 268. Type species: Thyridomyia palustris Saunders (= Ceratopogon monilicornis (Coquillett), by original designation.

nana (Macfie), 1939a: 171 (Lasiohelea). Brazil (Santa Catarina)

univesicula Macfie, 1939a: 170. Brazil (Santa Catarina)

Subgenus TRICHOHELEA Goetghebuer

APELMA Kieffer, 1919b: 64 (preoccupied by Billberg, 1820). Type species: Apelma auronitens Kieffer (= Trichohelea tonnoiri Goetghebuer), designation by Macfie, 1940b: 16.

TRICHOHELEA Goetghebuer, 1920: 39. Type species: Trichohelea tonnoiri Goetghebuer, by original designation.

NEOFORCIPOMYIA Tokunaga, in Tokunaga and Murachi, 1959: 200 (as subgenus of Forcipomyia). Type species: Ceratopogon pectinunguis de Meijere, by original designation.

aeronautica Macfie, 1935b: 265. Guyana. Brazil records – Pará

opilionivora (Lane), 1947d: 159 (Lasiohelea). Brazil (São Paulo)

Subgenus WARMKEA Saunders

WARMKEA Saunders, 1957: 671 (as subgenus of Forcipomyia). Type species: Forcipomyia bicolor Saunders (= Forcipomyia lesliei Wirth), by original designation.

galindoi Wirth & Soria, 1980: 146. Panama. Brazil records – Pará

louriei (Macfie), 1935a: 49 (Lasiohelea). Brazil (Maranhão). Brazil records – Pará, Maranhão, Santa Catarina

nartheckophora Macfie, 1939a: 166. Brazil (Santa Catarina)

spinosa Saunders, 1957: 676. Puerto Rico (USA). Brazil records – Pará, Bahia, Rio de Janeiro

tuberculata Saunders, 1957: 677. Trinidad and Tobago. Brazil records – Amazonas, Pará

SUBFAMILY LEPTOCONOPINAE NOÈ, 1907

Genus LEPTOCONOPS Skuse

- LEPTOCONOPS Skuse, 1889: 288. Type species: Leptoconops stygius Skuse, by monotypy.
TERSESTHES Townsend, 1893: 370. Type species: Tersesthes torrens Townsend, by original designation.
MYCTEROTYPUS Noè, 1905: 114. Type species: Mycterotypus bezzii Noè, designation by Carter, 1921: 3.
PROTERSESTHES Kieffer, 1921b: 107. Type species: Tersesthes brasiliensis Lutz, by original designation.
SCHIZOCONOPS Kieffer, 1918: 135. Type species: Schizoconops indicus Kieffer, by monotypy.

Subgenus HOLOCONOPS Kieffer

- HOLOCONOPS Kieffer, 1918: 135. Type species: Leptoconops kerteszi Kieffer, by original designation.
MICROCONOPS Kieffer, 1921b: 108. Type species: Microconops vexans Kieffer, by original designation.

knowltoni Clastrier & Wirth, 1978: 26. USA (California). Brazil records – Santa Catarina

Subgenus LEPTOCONOPS Skuse

- brasiliensis (Lutz), 1913: 66 (Tersesthes). Brazil (Amazonas). Brazil records – Acre, Amazonas, Pará
